Description

Bernard Fell preaches about the importance of God's Word as a guiding light in our lives, drawing parallels between a lost puppy without a tag and mankind straying from God's pathway. He emphasizes the significance of the Bible as a source of endless treasures, pleasures, comfort, peace, and rest, contrasting it with the skepticism and aimlessness of critics and atheists.

Transcript

Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet,

and a light unto my path.

Psalm 119:105

There's a saying sometimes quoted

"Ev'ry dog will have his day."

But the puppy of this poem

Came by train and lost his way!

"Where's he going'?" was the question,

As the friendly tail did wag;

Said the porter with a problem,

"I don't know, he's chewed his tag!"

Timid sheep, like this quadruped,

Go astray, the prophet said;
So mankind, God's pathway leaving,
Chose a devious course instead.
There's a lamp to guide our footsteps
As through life we onward go,
There's a light, its beams revealing
Snares and pitfalls we should know.
'Tis the holy, sacred Bible,
Of all books by far the best;
Full of treasures, endless pleasures,
Bringing comfort, peace, and rest.
Critics scorn, and skeptics censure,
Some are atheists, so they brag;
Undirected, they resemble
That lost puppy and his tag!
