Description

Billy Sunday passionately preaches against alcohol, expressing his determination to combat the saloon culture that he believes leads to the destruction of lives and families. He emphasizes his commitment to fighting against the influence of alcohol in society, vowing to continue his efforts until he can no longer physically do so. His fervor reflects a deep concern for the future of the youth and the moral fabric of America, as he envisions a nation free from the grip of alcohol.

Transcript

...of civilization in our land. It was because I didn't want our boys to die drunkards that I fought and fight. I'm going to live long enough to see America so dry you have to prime a man before he can spit.

And I'll fight the saloon from Hawaii to Hoboken. And I'll kick it as long as I've got a foot. And I'll punch it as long as I have a fist.

I'll butt it as long as I have a head. I'll bite it as long as I have a tooth. And when I'm old and fistless and footless and toothless I'll gum it till I go home to glory and it goes home to perdition.
