

The Fear of the Lord

by D.L. Moody

The Fear of the Lord is the foundation of true knowledge and wisdom, and trusting in God is essential for understanding and enlightenment.

Scripture: Psalm 14:1, Proverbs 1:7, Proverbs 9:10, Romans 1:21, 1 Corinthians 3:19

Topics: "Fear Of The Lord", "True Knowledge"

Description

D.L. Moody emphasizes that the fear of the Lord is foundational to true knowledge, asserting that without trust in God, one's understanding is incomplete and flawed. He warns that even those who achieve great knowledge in science are ultimately ignorant if they turn their hearts away from God. Moody highlights that claiming there is no God is foolishness, regardless of one's worldly wisdom or accolades.

The Fear of the Lord

"The Fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge." He who does not trust in God, knows nothing yet as he ought to know. His knowledge is partial and distorted. Whatever acquisitions in science he may attain, if his heart depart from the Living God, he abides an ignorant man. He who in his heart says, "No God. " is a fool, however wise he may be in the estimation of the world, and his own.
