

The Hill Country of the Soul

by John Henry Jowett

The sermon emphasizes the importance of cultivating a deep connection with God and recognizing the presence of His righteousness in our lives, which brings inspiration, motivation, and peace.

Scripture: Psalm 36:6, Psalm 121:1, Psalm 125:2

Topics: "Spiritual Guidance", "Divine Salvation"

Description

John Henry Jowett preaches about the importance of seeking inspiration and guidance from the hills in our lives, representing the big things that give meaning to the monotony of our daily routines. He emphasizes the impact of noble companionship, especially when that Companion is God, in bringing light and beauty to our ordinary tasks. Jowett highlights the hills as symbols of salvation and defense, with God's righteousness likened to great mountains that bring forth peace to His people.

Transcript

PSALM cxxi.

There should be a hill country in every life, some great up-towering peaks which dominate the common plain. There should be an upland district, where springs are born, and where rivers of inspiration have their birth. "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills."

The soul that knows no hills is sure to be oppressed with the monotony of the road. The inspiration to do little things comes from the presence of big things. It is amazing what dull trifles we can get through when a radiant love is near. A noble companionship glorifies the dingiest road.

And what if that Companion be God? Then, surely, "the common round and daily task" have a light thrown upon them from "the beauty of His countenance."

The "heavenlies" are our salvation and our defence. "His righteousness is like the great mountains." "The mountains bring forth peace unto His people."
