

Whitefield Preached to Crowds of Fifty Thousand

by Keith Malcomson

This sermon discusses the former rain, symbolizing the day of Pentecost and the beginning of a spiritual harvest. It emphasizes how the former rain, though moderate, paved the way for greater outpourings of God's Spirit in the future. The speaker highlights historical examples like Whitefield and D.L. Moody, who experienced powerful moves of God that impacted thousands and even millions of souls, illustrating the continuous work of God's rain over the past 2,000 years.

Scripture: Joel 2:23, James 5:7, Acts 2:1, Matthew 9:37, Psalm 72:6

Topics: "Spiritual Harvest", "Outpouring of the Holy Spirit"

Transcript

I've given you the former rain moderately. What is the former rain, the first rain? The day of Pentecost. And so Joel says, when it comes on the day of Pentecost, the former rain will be moderate.

It's in Jerusalem, it begins in Jerusalem, it's the beginning of the harvest, but it's moderate, it is actually small compared to what I'm going to do in the following days. Do you know outside London, Whitefield stood preaching to crowds of 40,000, 50,000, 60,000. He could be heard preaching two miles away.

This city got stirred by D.L. Moody and almost a million souls come to listen and preach in this city of London as he evangelized the very heart of this nation. Over this 2,000 years, we have seen the rain of God fall.
