

Genuine Fruit and Faith Are Inseparable

by Randy Krahn

This sermon emphasizes the inseparable connection between genuine faith and producing fruit, highlighting that faith without works is incomplete. It contrasts the belief in a resurrected Jesus with the belief in a Jesus who remains in the tomb, emphasizing the hope and power found in the living God, Jesus Christ, who intercedes for believers and sends the Holy Spirit.

Scripture: James 2:17, John 14:18, Galatians 5:22, John 15:5

Topics: "Faith and Works", "The Power of the Resurrected Christ"

Description

This sermon emphasizes the inseparable connection between genuine faith and producing fruit, highlighting that faith without works is incomplete. It contrasts the belief in a resurrected Jesus with the belief in a Jesus who remains in the tomb, emphasizing the hope and power found in the living God, Jesus Christ, who intercedes for believers and sends the Holy Spirit.

Transcript

Because genuine faith and fruit are inseparable. You can't separate faith from fruit. Show me a man who says he has faith without fruit, without works.

You say, oh, you're preaching legalism. No, I'm preaching the power of God. We believe in a Jesus that was resurrected.

Some people believe in a Jesus that's still in the tomb. This is not the hope that we have. We don't preach Buddha.

We don't preach Muhammad. We preach Jesus Christ. We preach a living God.

One who's seated in the heavens, interceding for us. And who's not left us as orphans. He's come to us in the form of the Holy Spirit.
