

Ah, Sirs!

by Thomas Brooks

The sermon emphasizes the urgent need to seek holiness before it's too late, as the brevity of life and the certainty of judgment draw near.

Scripture: Psalm 51:10, Matthew 7:13-14, Matthew 25:46, Luke 13:24, Romans 6:23, 2 Corinthians 5:10, Hebrews 12:14, James 4:8, 1 Peter 1:16, Revelation 20:15

Topics: "Eternity", "Holiness"

Description

Thomas Brooks passionately warns about the imminent reality of eternity and the urgency of seeking holiness. He emphasizes that time is fleeting, and the distance between the soul and eternal damnation is alarmingly short. Brooks calls for heartfelt prayer and mourning for holiness, stressing that without it, true happiness is unattainable and hell awaits. The sermon serves as a wake-up call to the listeners to reflect on their spiritual state and the necessity of pursuing a righteous life.

Transcript

Ah, sirs! It may be that there are but a few weeks, nay, a few days, nay, perhaps but a few hours-- between your souls and eternity, between your souls and everlasting burnings, between your souls and a devouring fire, between your souls and damnation! Will you not then pray and mourn, and mourn and pray, for that holiness, without which there is no happiness, yes, without which hell and destruction will be forever your portion?
