

It Pierces and Winds Itself Into Every Corner and Chink

by Thomas Brooks

Sin is a pervasive force that affects every aspect of our lives, corrupting our thoughts, judgments, and experiences.

Scripture: James 1:14

Topics: "Spiritual Vigilance", "The Nature of Sin"

Description

Thomas Brooks emphasizes the pervasive and penetrating nature of sin, illustrating how it infiltrates every aspect of our lives, including our thoughts, judgments, and affections. He warns that sin corrupts our understanding and poisons our will, ultimately debasing our lives and affecting our duties and mercies. The sermon serves as a stark reminder of the need for vigilance against sin's subtle encroachments.

Transcript

SIN is of a penetrating nature. It pierces and winds itself into every corner and chink--into our thoughts, words, and works. It will wind itself . . . into our understandings to darken them, and into our judgments to pervert them, and into our wills to poison them, and into our affections to disorder them, and into our consciences to corrupt them, and into our lives to debase them. Sin will wind itself into every duty and every mercy; it will wind itself into every one of our enjoyments and concernments.
